Ned Hanlon and his crew jumped into town yesterday afternoon, and in two short hours accomplished that which they have sought after for more than a month. They met and defeated the Cardinals while Pittsburg was annexing the second game of a double-header from Philadelphia, and thereby pulled themselves up to a level with the Quakers in the percentage column. To-mor-row they will make an effort to boost themselves into the long coveted second place.

The game began with about 300 of the faithful sunning themselves in the bleachers and a sprinkling of overcoated forms perched in the grandstand. The crowd occasionally thawed out long enough to pierce the atmosphere with a few weak cheers which were lost on the cool autumn air before they got any farther than the umpire. The crowd increased, until at the end nearly a thousand fans were assembled to witness the defeat of the Donovanites. The Hanlonites were late getting into town and arrived barely an hour before time was called. They came out to the Vandeventer called. They came out to the Vandeventer avenue park wrapped in overcoats and were hardly given time to warm up before Umpire Emsile called all hands to the solree.

Jack Powell, whose great heart was full of compassion for the shivering visitors, was kind and the Brooklynites were not slow to take advantage of his benificence. It took the Hanjanies these impires to see took the Hanionites three innings to get the range, but when they finally did guage Powell's slants, bull's eyes were registered with frequency. In two innings the Superbas made their lead a long and a safe one. A bunching of hits, including a pair of extra base raps, turned the trick.

The two new parts of the Cardinal management of the cardinal management.

The two new parts of the Cardinal machine, Richardson and Joyce, were fitted into place during the game. Richardson covered the initial cushion in a creditable manner. His work was nappy with one exception. He showed lack of judgment in neiting a bail for a putout, unassisted, where he should have allowed Joyce to aid him. The Terre Haute man stood well at the bat and rapped the bail out every time. He connected only once safely, however, but the hit was well placed.

Joyce made his debut in the sixth inning after the visitors had welted the ball for seven runs. He made a favorable impression on the fans. His siants were held under fair control and he had the left-handed latters of the Brooklyn team guessing. He displayed a faculty for placing them close in to the batters's bodies and before he was through, had the Hanlonites ready to dodge every time he unwound himself for a pitch.

every time he unwound himself for a pitch; In the four innings in which he officiated he held the Hanlomtes down to five hits and one run. He fielded his position well, and displayed nimbleness in backing up Rich-ardson on one or two plays at the first cor-ner.

Mike Herdon was chosen to do the receiving, but his work at times was very raw. He couldn't locate the middle sack with his throws, and once attempted to nip
a runner when there was no one to b-ndle
the ball at the other end. Heydon was up three times and got out with a record of one hit, a two-bagget. Etchardson was given a hand when he went to bat, but his smashes all went awry until the ninth inning, when a stinging drive over second scored Padden. Joyce only came up once with his tree, and went out over the Pad.

smashes all went awry until the ninth inning, when a stinging drive over second
scored Padden. Joyce only came up once with his tree, and went out over the Padlen-Kelley route.

The start gave the spectators some opportunities to enthuse, but before the game had progressed far the expected occurred.
The Hanlonites could not keep their raps
on the ground and went out like a bad cigar is the first two rounds. Jesse Burkett went after that record with a two-base drive to right in the first inning, and Heidrick followed with a single past Irwin.
Padden and Wallace cancelled their efforts by a pair of high raps which were smothered in good fashion. Three balloon chasers in the second inning retired the side.

McCreery Comes to Grief.

Powell got in a four-time hit in the third finning, which mixed Sheckard and McCreery together to the latter's disadvantage. The ball salled well out to left center and looked safe, but Sheckard and McCreery made a dash for it. Just as McCreery reached up to pull it down Sheckard crossed the right-of-way, colliding with McCreery, and the latter lost the ball as he tumbled. He did not rise for a few moménts, and when he did he displayed a perceptible limp. He was escorted to the clubbouse on the arm of a policeman and "Cozzy" Dolan chased out to take charge of his suburb. Powell easily made the circuit on the play.

The Brooklynites obtained revenge in the

of his suburb. Powell easily made the circuit on the play.

The Brooklynites obtained revenge in the fourth inning by tanning the horschide for three runs. Dolan doubled to the right garden and Kelley promenaded. Daly sacrificed and Dahlen's welt to right scored both Dolan and Kelley. Irwin's fly lit on a sheet of Burkett tanglefoot, but McGuire sent the ball on another voyage to center, on which he annexed two bases, Dahlen the meanwhile scoring, Kitson might have done something, but he fanned, which was not at all necessary on such a cool day as yesterday.

something, but he fanned, which was not at all necessary on such a cool day as yesterday.

Dick Fadden tried hard for a hit in the fourth and gave the ball a resounding siap, but Kitson broke the force of the driva with his mit, and Dahlen picked the leather up and handed it to Kelley before Dick could connect with the base. Wallace popped up a "Texas Leaguer" which noarly soared out of sight and finally fell between Dolan and Shekard, and Bobby planted himself safely on second. Donovan's out, Daly to Kelley, put Wallace on third. Richardson's effort was a rap down the first base line, which Kelley ate up and Wallace expired at the third corner.

The Hanlonites again hairpooned Powell's benders in the fifth inning and for a few minutes the ball received a hard lacing. Dolan began with a single to right and Keeler, Sheckard and Kelley each negotiated safe raps, the bunch of hits netting two runs. Daly again laid himself on the altar of sacrifice and succeeded in advancing all hands. Dahlen poked a puny grounder to Powell, but Charley Irwin pasted a three-base label on the ball, and Sheckard and Kelley crossed the pan while Burkett was picking the ball out of the graes at the further end of the left bleachers. Irwin died on third on McGuire's fly to Heidrick.

The crowd then began to wag its tongue and hurled uncompilmentary remarks at Powell, all the while adjuring Donovan to give Joyce a trial. Accordingly, Joyce and Nichols limbered up in front of the grand stand while the Cardinals were fishing for runs. Kruger and Heydon registered outs in succession, and Powell topped off the inning by striking out.

Joyce Replaces Powell.

Joyce was given a hand when he walked to the slab, and alitson, who was first up, rapped smartly to Richardson. The latter made a neat stop, and Joyce ran over to cover the sack. He should have had the putout, but Richardson wanted to do it all himself, and just did beat Kitson to the base. It was an unwise play on Richardson's part, as Kitson, had he been so inclined, could have given him a good bruising in a collision, which was narrowly averted, as Richardson placed himself directly in the runner's path. Doian was an easy out, Joyce to Richardson. Kruger handled Keeler's slow-going rap with the dexterity of a hod carrier, and Willie went safe. Sheckard's aerial rap to Donovan cut off possible runs. Burkett tried hard to drive one through Dahlen in the sixto, but the latter scooped up the drive with ease. Heidrick, however, got a line on one of Kitson's twisters and boosted the sphere over Sheckard's head, covering three bases on the hit. Padden faced Kitson with grim determination written on his face, but retired in disgust on a foul fly, which Kelley took care of. Wallace fattened Dahlen's fielding average to the extent of one chance, which the latter was equal to, and J. Emmet was cruelly cut out of a run. Kelley led off with a single in the seventh, and pilfered the middle cushion. Heydon had a nervous moment, and tried to cross him out, nobody being on second to stop the throw. Kelley easily took third on the error. Joyce fanned Dahlen in this inning, but Irwin's single to right scored Kelley.

In the eighth kitson succumbed to three deceptive ones, but Dolan placed a safe one be

The Music Committee is now negotiating with an impressario of international renown with a view to obtaining his services for this post. The efforts to secure his services seem to indicate a favorable result. If the arrangements are completed before the recommendation of the Music Committee is submitted to the Executive Committee his name will accompany that report.

In conjunction with the World's Fair Chorus of 1.600 voices, the committee will recommend that St. Louis musical directors be sent to the large cities of the country to organize Exposition choruses, which may be trained in these places for subsequent appearance at a congress of American choruses at the Fair. It is expected that this work of preparation would become a splendid means of advertising the Fair throughout the country. Choruses from abroad will be invited to contest at the Exposition for awards. Among the newcomers who have reported for the University of Pennsylvania team practice are Bennett, Corley, Jordan, Magee, Kirkpatrick, Hutchinson, Broderson and Wetzell. Coach Woodruff got his men in an informal line-up yesterday, as follows: Metzger, right end; Donaldson, right tackle; Anderson, right guard; Jordan, center; Mitchell, left guard; McCabe, left tackle; Ludes, left end; Howard, quarter back; Bennett, right half back; Snook, left half back; Davidson, full back.

Coach Pat O'Day has some fairly good material to pick from at Notre Dame, and six of last year's men have reported for practice. These are: Captain Fortin; McGiue and Luis, backs; Cuilinan, tackie; O'Malley, guard, and Kirby, end. Five old men-Farragher and Standt, tackles; Gillen, guard; Sammon, half back, and Pick, quarter—are expected back to-day.

Coach Yost is said to be putting the Ann Arbor men through a pretty severe course of training, besides making them run a quarter of a mile at good speed twice each day, after training hours. He has adopted a system of shifting the men about, placing Neil Snow, the end, at full back.

Neil Snow, the end, at full back.

Coach A. A. Stagg of the C' 'cago Iniversity eleven believes that quickness is of more importance than weight if one has to be altogether abandoned. On this subject he spoke recently as follows:

"I like beef in a line, but I like a man that will get away fast with the ball. Line twenty men up and order them to get away with the ball, and there will always be one to get away last. That one would often be most promising if weight and fighting spirit were to be considered alone.

"Watch the ball and get away with it. It is born in some men to know instinctively when the ball is to be snapped. This enables that player to start a fraction of a second ahead of the snap, enough time to give him a chance to slip through the opponent's line. This quickness of thought seems oftenest to come to a man lightly weighted in the beef line. When it comes in a man of 190 or 200 pounds it is invaluable to a football coach."

Some wise saws of the same order were uttered by Wallie McCornack, head coach for Dartmouth, who went East recently. He expressed himself as follows:
"The Eastern coaches don't teach a lineman to make holes any more, although when a back used to want to go through a line he had to have a door to do it. The forwards, accordingly, would break their backs, timing the hole right, as a rent in the line don't stay open long.
"Nowadays, the coach sends his men in to get the lunge on the opposing player and get him back out of the way by hook or crook, or else to one side, and pull him through any way to make him useless to his own team. It is absolutely necessary for a lineman to be a quick starter, and this can come partly by long training."

It is practically certain that Washington University will not play the Christian Brothers College this year, such a decision having been reached at a meeting of the Alumni Governing Committee last year. The simple question involved at that time was the matter of gate receipts, which, it is believed, will be larger if outside colleges are taken on than if C. B. C. is played.

A game may be arranged between the two for some day other than Saturday, but this is uncertain. An informal schedule of the college games has been prepared, and no mention of C. B. C. is made therein. Although, as no contracts have been signed for any of the games, there is an element of uncertainty attached to most of them as yet. St. Louis University and C. B. C. may come together on Thanksgiving Day as a result of this decision on the part of Washinton University.

season, the most available material at both colleges seeming to insure teams of the sort.

At Christian Brothers speed is especially marked in the work of the men, and team work has already been developed to a surprising degree. Coach Bland had the men divided into two squads yesterday, giving the ball to one squad and sending the other against it. Plenty of rapid practice at interference and tackling was thus given.

As regards interference, the members of C. B. C. played as if they were a seasoned team, working in perfect unison. Tackling has been well developed by some of the players, notably the youngest Brockmeler and by young Jackson. The old men, of course, showed up to good advantage. McDonald, who attended the college last year, but did not play, appears to be a promising acquisition this year.

At Bt. Louis University tackling practice was gone through with yesterday, but the work of the men was not so snappy and vigorous as that at C. B. C. From present indications it appears that C. B. C. will have one of the best elevens for team work and rapid play that have been turned out in this city in recent years.

In the St. Louis University line-up Johnson played well at center yeaterday. Davis at tackle. Hoffman at end and Hickey at guard. Schreiner is expected back Monday, McDowall, Schauecker and Linn were on the field yesterday afternoon, and Donovan, captain of last year's team, also attended, but did not take part in the practice.

PANIC-STRICKEN WOMEN.

Inmates of a Burning Building! Have Narrow Escape.

REPUBLIC SPECIAL.

Springfield, Ill., Scpt. 20.—Fire to-night completely destroyed the Women's building on the State Fair Grounds and precipitated a ranic among thirty young women from various parts of the State who were quartered in the structure. The women escaped in their night clothes and lost most of their effects in the flames.

A school of domestic science was opened in the building last Monday, and the pupila occupied rooms in a dormitory on the third floor at night.
